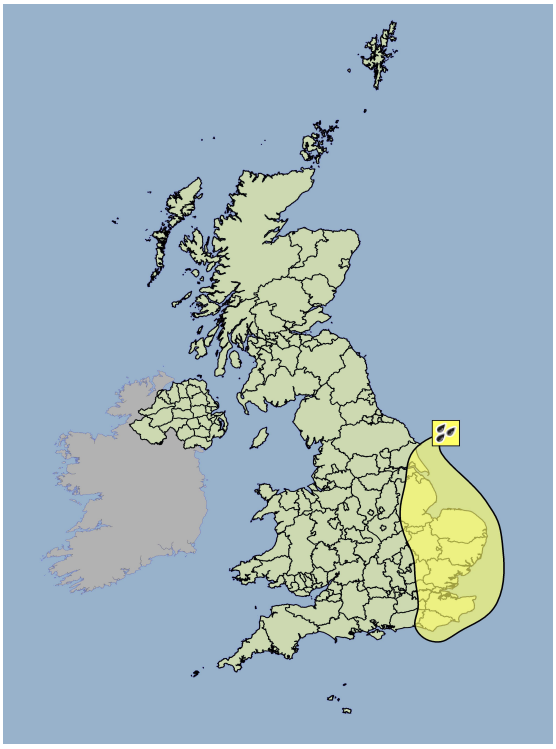
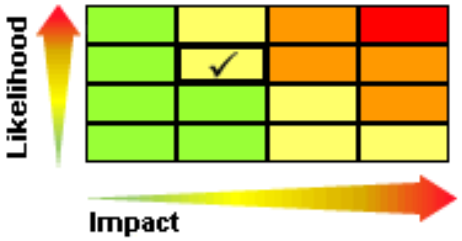
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal zone will introduce an area of moist and unstable air into eastern parts of the United Kingdom later on Thursday. This will bring the risk of some locally heavy rainfall over a short period of time.

There remains some uncertainty in how far west the area of cloud and rain will extend as well as the timing of onset, and the public are advised to keep up to date with the forecast and warnings.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 18:00 on Thu, 10th Jul 2014 until 09:00 on Fri, 11th Jul 2014

Outbreaks of rain will become heavy at times through Thursday evening and night across parts of eastern England. Although not all areas will see heavy rainfall, where it does occur some local surface water flooding is possible. Rain is likely to become confined to the extreme southeast by Friday morning.

The public should be aware of the risk of local disruption to transport and outdoor events.

This warning has been updated to delay the onset of the heaviest rain and to reduce the western and northern extent of the area at risk.
